

What was the most unique solution to a puzzle that you heard during the game?

How were you able to effectively communicate your ideas to your group?

How would you describe the game experience to a family member?

Describe your comfort level for sharing ideas with your group throughout the game.

How could your group improve communication if you were to play again?

If you were playing this game with a new group, what would you say beforehand to set them up for success?

How would the game have looked if all the communication was non-verbal?

Why did your group succeed or fail in completing the game?

What advice would you give another group of players before playing a Breakout EDU game?

Shout Out:
Describe how another member of your group exemplified communication.

Describe a time in the game when your group had a lightbulb moment.

How can a game like this make your group better problem solvers?

Describe the strategy or process you used to solve the puzzles.

Explain something new you learned through playing the game.

Describe a connection to another experience you've had that relates to the experience playing today.

How could your group have been more effective in completing the game?

How might you change one of the puzzles to make it more challenging?

Which puzzle in the game was the most difficult?
Describe how your group worked together to solve it.

Describe how this game, or one of the puzzles, relates to a current world problem.

Shout Out:
Describe how another member of your group exemplified critical thinking.

Describe how you collaborated with different members of your group.

If your group played this game again, what would you change about the approach to solving the puzzles?

Describe a moment when you had to step forward or step back to improve group collaboration.

Describe a moment in the game when your group worked well together.

How did your group honor everyone's ideas during the game?

How did you contribute to the rest of the group?

How did your group utilize each individual's strengths?

Describe a moment when your group became frustrated. How could you avoid that next time?

Describe how everyone in your group had an opportunity to contribute.

Shout Out:
Describe how another member of your group exemplified collaboration.

Write a game review for this game as if it was posted online.

Write a story with a plot that connects to our current unit of study.

Create a unique "We Broke Out" sign for this game.

Create an advertisement highlighting your team's problem-solving skills.

Create a game map describing how each puzzle and lock were connected.

Create one or two new puzzles for this game.

Tell the story of game
using only emojis.

Create a comic strip illustrating your favorite moment of the game.

Design a movie poster for this game.

Write a new plot for the game.
____ OR ____
Write a sequel to the game.

Write a poem
(Haiku, Acrostic, etc.)
that can be used as a clue in the game.

Create a music playlist that would have worked with the game.

