“An Open Book is an Open Mind.”
Dear Library Patrons,

If you are reading this letter, I regret to inform you that the library is closed for the day. I must have not checked all of the nooks and crannies in the library and you might have fallen victim to my negligence and therefore are stuck here until morning... unless you’re savvy enough to follow my secret method for getting out without tripping the alarm. This escape plan does require that you know a bit about my library.

To begin, please verify that the newest additions to the library are neatly stacked and orderly. Next, please check that all of the computer terminals are turned off and then verify the 900 series (History) has at least three books on former Presidents. Please dispose of any newspapers older than one week old. Finally, there might be something awaiting you on page four from your favorite author (yours truly).

Best of luck,

Mr. Lemoncello

Dear Victorious Gamers:

Hearty and splendidificous congratulicitations to thee from me!
You Broke Out of Mr. Lemoncello's Library! Way to use your noodle (the one in your head, not the one from a swimming pool).
You worked together in a way that would make Team Kyle proud.
You solved so many tricky puzzles! You unlocked so many locks!
You are fantabulous. And, remember, the best thing you can do to keep your brain sharp, without having to purchase a brain sharpener, is to always keep on reading!

Wondermously yours,

Luigi L. Lemoncello
Congratulations on breaking out! You are the true all-stars!
